

Prosecution

Prosecution is a foundation of our work at Rothwell Figg. For four decades, our attorneys have guided clients through the strategy, research, drafting, and procedure of commercializing their innovations. Whether what's at issue is a patent, a trademark, a copyright, or a portfolio, the experience and strategic thinking we bring to the task put our clients in the strongest possible position, whether in the United States or globally.

Most of our attorneys have either industry experience, advanced degrees in the relevant science, or both. This enables us to quickly grasp the science behind the technology, and effectively work with our clients. It also allows us to be exceptionally cost-effective, and to think, and work, strategically. We understand the broader IP landscape within which our work needs to fit, and build patents, trademarks, and portfolios for business-critical innovation into long-term strategies that maximize benefit and minimize risk.

With the pace of innovation and the scale of change accelerating almost daily, the versatility, teamwork, and insight the Rothwell Figg team brings to prosecution gives our clients a competitive advantage. We understand the science, we know the procedure, we bring decades of hands-on experience to what we do, and most importantly, we help our clients realize, and protect, the benefits of their work.