The world's leading IP strategists recently were named in the online edition of a unique guide published by Intellectual Asset Management (IAM). IAM Strategy 300: The World's Leading IP Strategists lists individuals that in-depth research has shown to possess world class skills in the development and roll-out of strategies that maximize the value of patent, copyright, trademark, and other IP rights. Rothwell Figg's R. Danny Huntington was included in the 2015 edition.

Described in IAM's research as "among the best and most knowledgeable patent practitioners in the United States," Danny is involved in all phases of intellectual property law, including United States and foreign patent prosecution; litigation in the federal and state courts; licensing; and general client counseling. He has extensive patent interference experience, with particular experience in biotechnology and pharmaceuticals, and was a former chemist for The Gillette Research Institute.

IAM researchers in the United States, Europe, and Asia spoke to a wide range of senior corporate IP managers, as well as third-party IP service providers, in order to identify these IP leaders: those whose business is the creation, development, and deployment of strategies that enable IP owners to gain maximum value from their portfolios. Only those individuals nominated multiple times by different parties as outstanding IP strategists are listed in the IAM Strategy 300.

"As in previous years, we have dedicated significant editorial and research resources to ensuring we identify only world class IP strategists, so we are confident that all those named in the IAM Strategy 300 2015 fully merit the recognition that they have received," says IAM editor Jeff Wild. "We salute each and every one of them."
