On Tuesday, December 3, 2019, a team of Rothwell Figg attorneys appeared in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia on behalf of pro bono client Agudas Chasidei Chabad of United States as part of Chabad's lawsuit against the Russian Federation. The hearing was only the most recent milestone in the long-standing effort to secure the return of the Schneerson archive and library, which was seized by the Nazis and is currently being held illegally by Russia. Steven Lieberman led the efforts on behalf of Rothwell Figg at a hearing covering several pending motions and involving attorneys on behalf of the United States Government and two third-parties. Specifically, the hearing concerned Chabad's request for an additional sanctions award of $78,300,000.00 against the Russian Federation, in addition to the $43,700,000.00 in sanctions that have already been secured. Chabad was also opposing efforts by the third-parties to resist discovery into Russian assets.

Chabad is represented by Steven Lieberman, Robert Parker, Jennifer Nock, and Richard Waterman of Rothwell, Figg, Ernst & Manbeck, P.C., and Nathan Lewin and Alyza Lewin of Lewin & Lewin, LLP. The case is Agudas Chasidei Chabad of United States v. Russian Federation, et al., No. 05-cv-1548.
