

Steven Lieberman Quoted in Washington Post Article on Commemoration of Historic Black Cemetery

Media Mention
10.27.20

Partner Steven Lieberman is quoted in a Washington Post article titled "Racial reckoning, new development reignite tension over commemoration of historic Black cemetery in Bethesda" on October 27, 2020.

Steven is part of a team representing the Bethesda African Cemetery Coalition (BACC) pro bono. The BACC seeks to stop the desecration of the Moses African Cemetery in Bethesda, Maryland, and to halt construction of a storage facility on the sacred ground.

"Nobody knows if there are bodies of enslaved or freed people on this site, but there is strong circumstantial evidence that there is," Steven is quoted as saying. "So the question is, is proper archaeology being done?"

To read the article in full, please click here. To view the article on The Washington Post website, please click here.

Key Contact

Steven Lieberman

Related Areas of Practice

Litigation